ENVIRONMENTAL

Gallagher & Kennedy's environmental practice group is dynamic and broadly based, representing trade associations and companies engaged in mining, utility, manufacturing, technology, real estate and financial services in multiple states.

Our environmental attorneys have extensive experience with a diversity of sophisticated environmental problems and focus areas. Members of the practice group have handled air and water quality issues, water rights and management matters, and solid and hazardous waste management. Our attorneys also adeptly handle Superfund exposure and liability, contamination issues and environmental due diligence. Real estate negotiations and transactions, as well as federal and state legislative and administrative lobbying and settlement negotiations, also lie within the purview and expertise of the practice group, as does litigation of all types of environmental matters.
